Relationships. Of course, parenting today is challenging, but the truth is that it has always been challenging. On the education conference circuit "21st century skills" is the certainty on the buzzword bingo card. Never mind that we're almost at the end of the second decade of a century that is the only one that every child in school has ever known. To be fair, it's a well-intentioned phrase used by well-intentioned people. I'm sure it's a phrase that's passed my lips on more than one occasion even before I saw the foolishness of it. Welcome to England. Some believe that the need to inculcate 21st century skills is the reason why schooling must radically transform. Others believe that we can't possibly know the future so eschew alternative pedagogy in favour of the teacher-centred, subject knowledge focused approach favoured in the Victorian era and driven by industrial processes.
