Geography is a field of study that deals with the physical features of the earth, including the seas, mountains and the countries of the world. A student of Geography therefore studies how the surface of the earth is differentiated, how factors such as elevation, climate, soil, vegetation, land use, industries, population and countries interact with each other. To make this study more manageable, geography is divided into two main branches of study namely: Human geography. Physical geography. However, geography can be divided into many sub-branches representing the various factors of the earth This book is the first complete geo-based account about the High Mountains of Sinai Peninsula.
