A Completely New Platform, Never Studied or Used Before: mRNA by Pfizer vs. Sputnik V Viral Vectors. Future development should focus on increasing the drug's stability under more natural temperatures. The Pfizer and BioNTech's vaccine is being widely discussed today. What are the prospects for alternatives in the near future? Many countries started their development at the same time. In coronavirus vaccine development, the Institute has taken the easiest path and used the platform it has been using for decades. Adenovirus-based vaccines have been studied since 1953. The Gamaleya Institute scholars have used them to create vaccines against Zika virus and Ebola virus, and are very well aware about how the adenovirus acts. The authors go through specific disciplines and how they might use blended learning; they also map out pathways for success. This is a must-read for those interested in blended learning." Dr. Frits Pannekoek, president, Athabasca University, Canada's Open University. Read this if you really want to improve learning and teaching in higher education and share in Randy's and Norm's success." Peter Bullen, University of Hertfordshire, United Kingdom. From the Inside Flap. Barbara E. Truman, director, Course Development and Web Services, University of Central Florida. "This book will make every university professor and administrator think about how they can improve the learning experience. Not only is it well-rooted in theory, but it is practical.
