Although classroom plays an important role in students' learning process, in my opinion, it is not the only place where real learning takes place. To begin with, learning basically has its process. Since learning is an individual process, the instructor or teacher cannot do it for students. I have spent more time in my desk chair (the same one I sat in competing in the World of Warcraft a decade ago, actually) working than I have anything else. 16 hour days are a regular thing. Entrepreneurship is gaming. Learning can be done anywhere. Classroom is just a resource from where you can gain some knowledge. Other such places are Internet, Experienced person, Books, real life situation ( learning from mistakes of others'). But outside classroom quality of resource may vary. It may be better or worse.
