An interesting analysis of long-wave economic cycles, but it would appear that it has marginal utility in today's world. Read more. Helpful. JEL Classification: Z Keywords: long waves, Kondratiev cycles, capitalism's crisis, the Conjunction Institute, random events, criteria of refutation, teleological method, genetic method. 1 Arthur Mustafin, National Research University Higher School of Economics (HSE), Moscow, Russia. E-mail: armustafin@hse.ru. First, there is the contentious question of the methods of detecting long waves, in particular a pronounced skepticism about the validity of the method proposed by Kondratiev (Garvy 1943; Metz 1987; Goldstein 1988; Maddison 2007; Poletaev and Savel'eva 2009, etc). We usually deal with the work of researchers who, even if they recognize the existence of long waves, still tend to give preference to spectral analysis.
