The Washington consensus has been relentlessly attacked in the early twenty-first century, not just by antiglobalization protesters but also by academic critics with better credentials in economics (see Rodrik 1997; Stiglitz 2002). This study considers the effect of these agreements on trade liberalization, and the lessons that this offers for other parts of the world, notably Asia. It finds broad geographical coverage of RTAs in the Americas, and evidence that these agreements have broadened and deepened liberalization. It stresses the importance of looking beyond tariffs on goods, to consider liberalization of services and removal of non-tariff barriers, both for academics assessing the true extent of liberalization, and for policymakers looking to ensure well-functioning RTAs.  Much more than documents. Uploaded by. Inter-American Development Bank (IDB)The Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) is the world's oldest and largest regional development bank. Since its founding in 1959, the IDB has become the single greatest source of multilateral support for social and economic development in Latin America and the Caribbean. Each year the IDB provides $9 billion of financial and technical assistance to nations throughout the region.  Support for community development projects in Central America and the Andean region has been contingent on specific measures to ensure access by indigenous groups.  POLICY-BASED LENDING. Since the 1990s the IDB has become much more directly engaged in the promotion of macroeconomic policy reforms in member countries. The Inter-American Development Bank (IADB or IDB or BID) is the largest source of development financing for Latin America and the Caribbean. Established in 1959, the IDB supports Latin American and Caribbean economic development, social development and regional integration by lending to governments and government agencies, including State corporations. The IDB has four official languages: English, French, Portuguese, and Spanish. Its official names in the other three languages are as follows
