Saved!: 100 years of the national art collections fund. by RICHARD VERDI. 0 Ratings. An exhibition of 400 art treasures saved from being acquired by overseas buyers is being held at a London gallery. The paintings, sculptures and archaeological pieces were acquired with the help of the National Art Collections Fund. The charity is celebrating its centenary with an exhibition entitled Saved! at the Hayward Gallery. It features works by Picasso, Mondrian, Rodin and Titian, among others, and opens on 23 October. The Fund has prevented masterpieces ranging from Antonio Canova's The Three Graces to Picasso's Weeping Woman disappearing from public view or going abroad.
